Question 10 Answer

The Second Amendment means that every law-abiding American citizen has the fundamental, individual right to keep and bear arms without permission slips, waiting periods, or government registries. It isn’t just about hunting or sport shooting. It’s the ultimate safeguard of a free people: the ability to defend ourselves against violent criminals today, and against a tyrannical government tomorrow if necessary.

As a former Green Beret who was pushed out of the Army over the COVID vaccine mandate, I saw firsthand how quickly government power can turn coercive. That experience reinforced exactly why the Founders put this right in the Bill of Rights. The Second Amendment exists precisely so that free citizens, not just the government, retain the means to preserve liberty. It’s not a privilege the state grants us, it’s a right we already possess that the Constitution forbids the government from infringing.

I don’t just support the Second Amendment. I live it every day.
