Question 14 Answer

To me, the Second Amendment protects the fundamental right of law-abiding Americans to own and bear arms for self-defense, the protection of their families, and the defense of their liberty. It reflects the principle that our rights come with personal responsibility and that citizens should not be completely dependent on government for their own security.
I also believe that protecting the Second Amendment means respecting responsible gun ownership, firearm safety, and the rights of individuals who follow the law. Constitutional rights should not be treated as privileges that can simply be taken away because they become politically inconvenient.
