Question 10 Answer

To me, the Second Amendment is the ultimate guarantor of all our other God-given liberties. It does not grant a right; rather, it serves as an absolute, explicit limitation on federal authority, declaring that the pre-existing right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

My worldview on this is deeply personal, forged during my honorable service in the United States Air Force Security Forces. I spent my military career carrying firearms to protect vital national infrastructure and defend lives, and I know exactly how critical a firearm is to establishing security and deterring threats. The Second Amendment ensures that everyday law-abiding citizens have the exact same right to protect their own families, their homes, and their communities from violence or tyranny without bureaucratic overreach or unconstitutional surveillance.

In Congress, I will view any attempt to implement a backdoor registry, restrict common firearm styles and standard accessories, or bypass judicial due process through "red flag" laws as a violation of our founding text. True public safety is achieved by supporting law enforcement and locking up violent criminals, not by stripping constitutional rights away from the people. I will stand as an unyielding firewall for lawful gun owners across Central Florida.
